Sitting Down for Lunch

Submitted by Ibork on November 13, 2015

Enny Mungawo and her family, including her mother Selia Zulu, and two of her four children, Ruth, 13, and David, 6, sit down for lunch at their homes in rural Zambia. Mungawo was able to build a second place for her and her children after earning more money by farming organically, part of a partnership with COMACO, a organic agriculture business with facilities in Chipata, Zambia. Mungawo, a lead farmer with COMACO, is a single mom, but with the money she makes from selling her crops and teaching others how to farm better organically, she is able to support her four children and mother as well as send her children to school. As part of her partnership with COMACO, she also received a small stove which can cook just as well as the traditional Zambian fire pit, but uses substantially less wood, keeping more trees from being chopped down. Photo by Greg Kahn for USAID
